They are free from Tesco, Asda and Morrisons, and come in 7 different flavours. The idea is to provide more variety of canned foods to customers in the snack aisle. The brewer says this will boost sales in the category. A spokesperson says: "A Sampler Can is a 'poor man's' hangover cure, as it is complete with a nutrition panel, five servings and all the vegetables you could ever want to help you get over the worst of it." The 2014 campaign includes a TV ad starring Bradley Walsh and support on social media channels, such as Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn. The survey also found that even in the most difficult markets, retailers are feeling optimistic about the coming months. "The end of the year is traditionally a time of reflection and reckoning for retailers, but many are still optimistic about the year ahead, despite the economic headwinds that are currently in play," said However, the survey also found that online sales experienced a further decline in May this year. This was the ninth consecutive month that sales growth has fallen. Amazon and eBay reported
