What's New in the Magic Ellipses Screensaver?

Magic Ellipses Screensaver will create thousands of fascinating ellipsoid shapes, which have never been seen before. These ellipses are interdimensional, which means that they have more dimensions than the usual three and that they exist outside the ordinary time-space that we live in. Let yourself be hypnotized by this neverending flow of Magic Ellipses!Q: Highlight = highlightall, click=clickall (match) I have a list of words which are linked to an image. When hovering over the text the word is also highlighted, when clicking the word is also clicked. Now I would also like the word to be also highlighted when hovered over. The problem is, that I have a lot of words, and I also have a lot of images. Is there a way to have one script for all the images and one script for all the text? The two scripts are like this: function UpdateTextBoxes(event) { var boxText = event.target.textContent; var index = $(boxText).find('.word').index(event.target); $(event.target).removeClass('word highlight'); $(event.target).addClass('word highlight'); } function UpdateImages(event) { var image = event.target; var index = $(image).find('.word').index(event.target); $(event.target).addClass('highlight'); } Hope it's clear what I'm trying to do. A: You can create a general function that then calls that specific function for a specific element and pass in the element and the desired attributes as parameters. Something like: function highlight_or_click(element, highlight_attribute, click_attribute) { var highlighted_attr = highlight_attribute || 'highlight'; var clicked_attr = click_attribute || 'click'; var $element = $(element); $element.removeClass(highlighted_attr); $element.addClass(highlighted_attr); $element.on(highlight_attr, function() { $element.remove
